ABOUT THE THEME :

A citizen is an individual recognized under the custom and law as being a legal member of a country, who swear its allegiance to a government in exchange of its protection. A citizen is one of the dominant pillars of the country. They are entitled to enjoy all the rights and privileges granted by a state to the people encompassing its constituency and are obligated to obey its laws.

Every state or country provides its citizens with some rights such as personal rights, religious rights, moral rights, economic rights and political rights etc. A right is a liberty that is protected by the state.

Rights are given to citizens for their individual moral, material or personality development and growth in social life. Democracy in the country can function only when its citizens have rights. A democratic system of the country is entirely founded on the freedom of its citizens to celebrate their rights.

However, with all the rights guaranteed to the citizens by the state, many section of our society be it children , women or minorities are still deprived of their basic rights. No meaningful development or growth of the individual or state can be possible without an in depth knowledge of the rights, in order to establish a society based on social order and justice.

Based on the above discussion, we invite interested Scholars, thinkers and researchers working on related fields to submit original abstracts of about 250 words dealing with, but not limited to, any of the following sub- themes:
